RED MEN'S CELEBRATION

Big Crowd Witnessed Parade and Sham Battle.

Despite the inclement weather on the Fourth the Red Men's celebration was a success in all features not necessarily dispensed with on account of the rain.

The procession formed at the P. R. R. depot at 10:30 and proceeded to the fair grounds as follows:

Miss Margaret Silver in Indian costume.

Dr. C. C. Dibert, cowboy.

Wolfsburg Band.

Co. L, 8th Regt., N. G. P., Capt. F. A. Metzger commanding.

H. C. James, Chief Marshall.

Indians on horseback.

Oklahoma Tribe, McIntosh.

Delegations from Everett, Six Mile Run, Altoona, Hollidaysburg and Huntingdon Tribes, in snake trail.

The rain necessitated dispensing with the address of welcome at the grounds.

At 1:30 the sham battle, which was a reproduction of the Custer Massacre, was fought between Co. L, in command of Captain Metzger and led by Dr. C. C. Dibert as a scout and the Indians in command of H. C. James, Esq. During the battle Mr. James had his right hand cut with the sight of a gun.

After the battle a number of Indians were trying to capture Dr. Dibert, who represented a cowboy.

In the firing a wad from a blank cartridge struck him on the ear and he fell from his horse. The wound bled profusely and the doctor sustained severe bruises in the fall. He was taken to an Altoona hospital on Friday for treatment, where he has about recovered. He is expected home today.

The ball game played during the afternoon is reported elsewhere in this issue.

S. S. Class Picnic

Miss Esther Fletcher's Sunday School class of the Reformed Church had a pleasant time at Island Park, Wolfsburg, on Wednesday. Boating was the special feature of the day and was enjoyed as well as the fine picnic lunch.

The picnicers were: Misses Esther Fletcher, Magdalene Reed, Marie Wertz, Florence Smith, Leone Sell, Romaine Reighard, Bertha Wills, Mary Evans and Lillian Stock, members of the class, and Christine Burnette, Clarabell Wohlsein, Lila Mabel and Jennie Brown, Dorothy Lutz, Jessie and Margaret Evans, Irma Russell, Kathryn White, Anna Guyer, Margaret Metzger, Stanley Brown, James and Patrick Hughes, Robert Amos, Tom Enfield, Lawrence Guyer, Kulp Metzger, Paul Cushing and Forest L. Reighard, invited guests.

Nelson Adolphson

Nelson Adolphson of Dudley died Friday noon, June 28, of typhoid fever in the Blair Memorial Hospital, Huntingdon, aged 32 years. His wife and three children survive; also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Adolphson, three sisters, Mrs. Fred Donelson and Mrs. G. W. Stuby, of Saxton, and Miss Lena Adolphson of Trough Creek. Interment was made in Dudley Cemetery on Sunday, June 30.

Sara Irene Griffith

Sara Irene, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Morris Griffith, died at their home in Pittsburgh Saturday evening, July 6, of typhoid pneumonia.

The funeral services were held Monday evening at the family home and interment was made in Mt. Royal Cemetery, Pittsburgh, on Tuesday.

Mrs. Griffith was formerly Miss May Amos of this place.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS

Superintendents Organizing Their Forces to Make Repairs.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 9.—Systematic maintenance of the 8,000 miles of road embraced in the 296 main highways routes of Pennsylvania's comprehensive plan for improvement of highways has been inaugurated by the State Highway Department, and the work is expected to show decided results before the end of summer. Maintenance of the roads taken over by the commonwealth is imposed upon the state by the Sprunt main highway act of 1911, and supervision of repair and upkeep is vested in superintendents having charge of one or more counties each.

This repair work is probably one of the largest tasks undertaken by any state in road improvement, and while the amount accomplished this year will be limited, owing to the comparatively small portion of funds at hand for the purpose, the organization of operations will be a long step in the line of progress.

The state has been divided into districts comprising from four to eight counties, and these districts have been sub-divided, the smaller divisions being in charge of the road superintendents who are responsible to the engineers in charge of the larger areas. The superintendents are organizing their forces for repairs, and roads which have been neglected or damaged will be put into shape for good traveling, especially those in the vicinity of market towns, so that farmers may be given the advantage of better roads and town residents obtain farm produce more easily. Gradually the work is to be extended as funds are made available by the legislature for repair of all state roads, which will naturally result in a stimulus to local improvement on township highways, many of which connect with main highways.

Repairs will consist of removal of humps, dragging, patching, underdraining and ditching, roads which have been built by the state since the organization of the Highway Department in 1903 will be put into good condition wherever they have been allowed to run down, special care will be taken to improve the drainage.

It is believed to be possible to put many roads into shape to last under proper maintenance for years to come, at least until they can be reconstructed out of the $50,000,000 bond issue for permanent road building which will come before the legislature of 1913 for final action, and then be submitted to the people for ratification in the form of an amendment to the constitution. The voting of this money to be spent throughout a term of years and according to a well thought out, definite plan will be of lasting benefit to rural communities and put Pennsylvania in the front rank of progressive states.

RURAL CARRIERS ORGANIZE

Association Formed in Court House on July 4.

The rural mail carriers of the county met in the Court House here on July 4 and organized the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of Bedford County. Nearly all the carriers of the county were present and those who were absent have expressed their desire to become members. D. B. Kypor of Woodbury was made Temporary Chairman and Scott R. Miller of Clearville Temporary Secretary.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Wilson Hissong, Cessna.

Vice President, D. B. Whetstone, Ostaburg.

Secretary, Scott R. Miller, Clearville.

Treasurer, D. B. Snowberger, New Enterprise.

Delegate to State Convention, Scott R. Miller, Clearville.

Alternate, Clarence B. Colvin, Schellsburg.

"Good Roads," "Parcels Post" and "The Good of the Service" were the principal topics discussed. Those absent carriers who wish to become charter members may do so by writing the Secretary.

The association adjourned to meet at the call of the President.

METHODIST DAY

August First at Lakemont Park, Altoona.

Arrangements have been made for the fifteenth annual gathering of Methodists at Lakemont Park, Altoona, on Thursday, August first, which promises to be the biggest gathering of its kind in the history of the assembling at Lakemont.

The newly-elected Missionary Bishop of Southern Asia, Rev. W. P. Evenden, D. D., former President of Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, will speak at the morning service; Bishop William Burt, D. D., LL. D., of Buffalo, N. Y., will deliver the address of the afternoon, and at the evening service Rev. A. E. Piper, D. D., of Pittsburgh will speak.

There will be excursion rates on all trains.

Saxton Store Changes Hands

S. B. and D. M. Stoler of Saxton have sold their general store, one of the largest in the county, to J. Homer Stoler of Saxton and Alvin L. Little, Esq., of Bedford, and the business will be continued under the firm name of Stoler and Little.

S. B. and D. M. Stoler had conducted the business since 1874 and made a success of it. They well deserve a rest from active labor. We bespeak for the new firm a full measure of success.

MENTIONED IN BRIEF

Town Talk and Neighborhood Notes Tersely Told.

MANY ITEMS OF INTEREST

Gleaned From Various Sources—Little Points Picked Up By Vigilant Reporters.

A baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Deffenbaugh last Sunday.

At a meeting of the school board last Friday evening, J. Anson Wright was elected treasurer.

A marriage license was issued in Cumberland this week to Harry W. Baring and Violet G. Fish, of Saxton.

Miss Alma Piper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Piper is ill with typhoid fever, but is getting along nicely.

Notices have been distributed forbidding the use of the water from the borough mains for anything but strictly domestic purposes.

Invitations have been issued to a Player Piano recital and dance at the Arandale Hotel this evening, given by the W. F. Frederick Piano Company.

The Cherokee Indian baseball team on Wednesday defeated the Everett nine of the latter's grounds in a 11-inning game by the score of 5 to 4.

The Church of God Sunday School of Saxton will hold a market every Saturday afternoon and evening in Weaver's store room, near the depot, for the purpose of raising a building fund.

Mrs. Wilson Hissong of Cessna was successfully operated upon at the Nason Hospital, Roaring Spring, on Monday for gall stones. Dr. W. F. Enfield of this place was present during the operation.

Miss Olive Enfield delightfully entertained a few of her friends at "500" Monday evening in honor of Miss Carrie Steckman of Lancaster. Dainty refreshments were served of which all partook heartily.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Stock, former pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Bedford, and for 25 years pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Hanover, with his family has moved to a bungalow on his farm near the city, which will be their permanent home.

Dr. W. E. Fawcett, who recently located in Rainsburg, made a hurried trip to his old home in Swissvale on business on the Fourth. A number of his old friends and patients tried to induce him to remain but he has had such assurance of success by the people of Rainsburg that he could not be persuaded to stay. He has equipped his offices with everything necessary to successfully care for his patients, and purchased a rig to make his calls.

During an electric storm here Tuesday noon the house of the Misses Wise was struck and a number of dishes broken and furniture toppled over. Wednesday evening Donald Line was stunned and fell while standing in the door at his home and Miss Vesta Brightbill was shocked while walking, the umbrella she was carrying being knocked from her hand. During this latter storm the home of John Lessig was struck and the chimney completely demolished and the roof damaged.

Magnificent Waterfalls and Beautiful Canons—Completion of Journey Through Nation's Wonderland.

The next day we drove close to the lake for a longer distance than before and finally came to the source of the Yellowstone River. Here trout by the millions, we are safe in saying, could clearly be seen in the water deep and shallow. It was not long until our hook secured an enviable rainbow trout. Now for the third time, the Concord Coach tourists envied the humble Old Faithful crowd, and as the teams went by, more than one exclaimed that "I bet the next trip I make through here, will be of the camping style."

At an altitude of 7,690, (so many altitudes are given to allow the reader to realize that the road was by no means level) the Hayden Buffalo Valley opened wide and without trees. Elk tracks were plentiful, and more numerous still were the Pelican and ducks that floundered about in the Yellowstone. As we passed the Crazy Meandering Creek, a badger started from the roadside and contentedly moved away. Wild horses beat a hasty retreat away into the horizon. The sun was bright; the air clear and the experiences new; and thus it all came true that no two miles of the park would duplicate themselves or allow the traveler to grow weary. The river narrowed and became deeper, and then rushed on to form the Rapids. To the west of the Rapids we pitched tents, or rather they were pitched for us, at noon. Then we were driven across the beautiful bridge to the right side of the Rapids, and our first glimpse of the Yellowstone Falls was afforded.

For a quarter of a mile above the plunge, the water prepares for its dash by increasing its speed as it goes swirling around the large masses of rock amid the stream. Before reaching the falls, the water makes an abrupt turn to the eastward presenting a beautiful landscape for the camera, made up of gentle curves. The height of these falls is about 125 feet, beautiful, yet not to be compared with the Great Falls of the Yellowstone a quarter of a mile below. The river between these cascades affords splendid brook trout fishing, but we did not indulge. While apparently placid, the river narrows immediately above the second fall to exactly 74 feet before making the awful leap of 360 feet into a narrow chasm that incloses the seething waters for a distance of 21 miles. Several high pinnacles were mounted from which the falls could be seen and the water in the canon 1,500 feet below. This is a place of distances. Everything appears large and magnified, so that the first inherent quiz that comes is relative to how far, how wide or how deep or how high it is from us. From Inspiration Point, three miles below, a splendid view is secured of the falls, the canon, the Castle Ruins and the interchanging colors with the characteristic Yellow from which the Park receives its name. No words are strong enough; no combination of them colored enough, or deep enough to tell those far away the pleasure the eye and senses receive as one gazes with amazement into the chasm where the eagle winds his droming flight and his home is secure from the hands of man. No less than five different places afford exceptional views, where we could have stood and wondered as we did later by the edge of a similar canon four times as deep and a thousand times as wide, along the Colorado, in Arizona.

Going back our guide offered to escort us down the noted trail to the base of the lower falls. By means of ropes a sheer descent of 752 feet was made along the canon wall, perilous, indeed, at places, but well worthy of the undertaking, for while at the base in the path of the foam and mist, surrounded with deafening noise, one gets a real idea of the magnitude of the water and the great height from which it falls. Carefully, we picked our steps and followed the course of the stream. Two hot springs were encountered at the very edge of the river or the canon, the water in the river being very cold in contrast. One lady accompanied our party of four, and in descending and ascending the ropes, she proved a professional climber.

That evening we visited the Canon Hotel, as we had done before. To the rear of the building a crowd had collected to await the bears as they frequented the garbage for their supper. The evening was rather unfavorable for this natural sight as only one Silver Tip appeared with her two cubs. That day closed with 25 miles. Tuesday morning started us up hill again from 7,617 to 8,114. Mose-

$3.50 RECIPE FREE, FOR WEAK MEN

Send Name and Address Today—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together. I think I owe it to my fellow man to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop dragging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, rebuilding, SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3584 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

toes in herds and myriads and any other way followed the long line of teams. Wagons were covered with veils and men on horseback wore something similar to the bee-hat. Our Skeeter Skoot came in just right and we used it liberally and with desired effect. The Virginia Cascades were now tame to the magnitudes passed by. Our wagon made good time with a point in view and in two hours' time had passed forty wagons either of the Transportation Company, the Wiley Way, Shaw & Powell or others all going one way—leaving the central wonder, the Yellowstone region. We were delighted to get back on the old trail by which we had entered, and then met an Old Faithful Party of seventeen, to whom we sent messages of "Finest time of your life is coming" or "Look out for mosquitoes."

Teams by the score were passed coming in. All in a merry spirit. Rich and poor, well dressed folks and others in khaki, young and old, horseback riders and a few of the sour sort, because they couldn't use their automobile. This is mere supposition, however, thrown in to indicate the absence of the motor cycle and the auto. No dogs, no nets, no traps, nor wagons of household goods, could be seen or found. Through the Golden Gate and the Silver Gate, passed the Hoodoos and a soldier milking his cows in pasture, into the Buffalo Corral, then Gardiner and the train for Livingston. We had gone through that far famed Yellowstone National Park. We could scarcely believe it. We had learned that the physical geography lessons were true, as far as they went; but that only a fractional part of one per cent. was told in those lessons we supposed puffed up, at times, to fill in space. We had noticed the variable effect of altitude upon vegetation and ourselves and temperature. At times, we longed for friends at home, that we might turn round and accompany them right over the trail again. Both of us thought of those who had inspired us to see the beauties they acknowledged could only be seen and not described. And pleased beyond measure were we with the courteous treatment, the splendid food, the freedom, the side trips, the information and comfort received at the hands of Billy and Tom, who represented the Old Faithful Camping Company, as our guide and cook. Mr. Hoover and I both felt sure that we would some time have the second opportunity to revisit this spot, if our plans worked in accordance with our inspiration.

The next story will follow our train through Montana, Idaho and Washington.

KEYSTONE PARTY

Places Full Ticket in the Field in Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM H. BERRY NAMED

For State Treasurer—Fusion With Democrats Desired—Will Keep Out of National Politics.

Fusion with the Democrats on a candidate for State Treasurer to be voted for in November was decided upon by the Keystone party of Pennsylvania, which held its state convention in Harrisburg Friday of last week, but the delegates refused to commit the party to the support of Woodrow Wilson for President and Governor Marshall for Vice President. The latter action was taken on the ground that the Keystone party was organized as a state organization and that among its members were followers in national affairs of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

After a minority report from the committee on resolutions pledging the party to the support of the Democratic national electors had been voted down by a vote of 98 to 26, Watson B. Adair of Pittsburgh read a statement signed by a number of the delegates to the effect that they intended to join a party now forming in the state, which will be known as the "Progressive party." It was stated that Wilson-Marshall electors will be placed on this ticket. The majority of the resolutions committee had recommended that no stand be taken by the convention in regard to the Presidential candidate and when the minority report was presented, L. G. Burns of Allegheny County took the platform and in a vigorous speech asked that the convention go on record as favoring the Democratic standard bearers. When he mentioned the name of Wilson he was loudly applauded by the spectators in the gallery and by a number of the delegates.

Antrim Opposes Berry

Clarence D. Antrim of Philadelphia, a former councilman, sought to prevent the nomination by the Keystone convention of William H. Berry, who is the Democratic nominee for State Treasurer. He took the stand that fusion could be obtained later on the state ticket and also on a legislative ticket. During his speech he was frequently interrupted with cries "Flinn," "Flinn," and "We will do it today." He had difficulty in proceeding and Mr. Antrim, who is known as a follower of former President Roosevelt, in advocating the postponement of fusion with the Democrats at this time said that "another party will be in the field."

The platform adopted by the convention favors the adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall "wisely guarded as emergency measures when representatives violate their obligations and become the tools of bosses and their dishonest business partners." A woman suffrage plank was also adopted.

The Congressmen-at-Large

The convention nominated four candidates for Congress-at-Large and a candidate for Auditor General. Those nominated for Congressmen are: C. A. Hawkins of York, the Rev. R. A. Hutchinson of Allegheny County; A. B. Garrett of Chester County, and Daniel W. Simkins of Philadelphia.

C. D. Scully, Jr., of Pittsburgh was named as the candidate for Auditor General. The Democrats and the Republicans have also a candidate in the field for this office but it is believed an effort will be made to bring about a fusion between the Keystone party and the Democrats on a candidate.

Henry C. Niles of York was elected both temporary and permanent chairman and Frank J. Gorman of Philadelphia secretary. About 161 delegates were present.

The Platform

Amid the excitement of the Presidential campaign, the danger is evident that scheming spoilsmen with hypocritical pretensions of devotion to progress may confirm their evil power.

This independent convention calls upon the citizens of Pennsylvania to consider calmly the cause of misgovernment in our state; and, disregarding former party affiliations, co-operate for fundamental reform. Party spirit, against which Washington left his solemn warning, cultivated by cunning politicians, has been the soil in which corruption has flourished, producing the party boss. The electorate has been debauched, justice has been impeded and the powers of government delivered to the privileged few.

Election laws have been so craftily complicated and responsibility so diffused among needlessly multiplied officials as to make easy the control of the commonwealth by political machines and their hidden manipulators.

No permanent improvement may be expected from the mere change of bosses.

To Overthrow All Bosses

The need of Pennsylvania is the overthrow of all bosses and the elimination of the partisanship and corruption by which they thrive.

The reforms desired by all good citizens will automatically follow.

The resources of the state will be conserved; rivers, harbors, canals and roads will be improved, and charitable appropriations made, systematically and economically, and not as party spoil; public utilities be controlled justly; taxes levied impartially; social and industrial justice enforced; human rights receive full protection, and special privileges be abolished.

The general, great and essential principles of liberty and free government will again be recognized, when Governors, legislators and judges shall truly represent the virtue and patriotism of the people instead of holding their positions as the reward of party service.

The Keystone party furnishes the instrument for non-partisan union of effort.

It has accomplished much; but much remains to be performed.

Its mission is to extend to the whole commonwealth the same non-partisan, honest, economical and efficient administration of the public business such as the election of Rudolph Blankenburg, and the application of the Keystone party principles have brought to Philadelphia.

We reaffirm our platform of 1910, emphasizing the demand for the abolition of the party square and that the election laws be so revised as to deprive machine marshaled partisans of their present undue advantage.

To Protect Women and Children

We favor adequate legislation to regulate the labor of children and to shorten their working hours, and to protect otherwise children and women employed in industry.

We favor the submission, to the voters of the state, of a constitutional amendment extending the right of suffrage to the women of Pennsylvania.

We favor the addition to the people's legal arsenal, of the initiative, referendum and recall, wisely guarded, as emergency weapons for use when representatives violate obligations and become the tools of bosses and their dishonest business partners.

We favor the immediate revision of the tax laws and the equalization of the tax burden.

We denounce the personal property tax as unjust and demand its abolition. We call for the repeal of the useless mercantile license tax which was created to provide political jobs.

We favor as most just and equitable a tax upon community-made land values and upon the franchises of public service corporations which would relieve industry of its burden, lower the cost of living, thwart monopoly, encourage enterprise, destroy the deadly slum in the city, and make productive the waste land of the country.

Favors Single Tax

In order to prevent disturbance of legitimate business we favor the gradual reduction of assessments on improvements and their imposition upon land values until the whole financial burden of government shall be placed upon community values and public service corporations.

We invite the co-operation of all good citizens, regardless of national party affiliations, for the complete overthrow of the old gang, not only, but also to save the state from any new combination of spoilsmen.

Until all bosses are dethroned, until the spoils system is destroyed; until popular government by the fairly elected representatives of the people, faithful to the people's constitution, is re-established; we will continue our battle for the redemption of the commonwealth.

The convention was called to order by Robert R. L. Dearden of Harrisburg, chairman of the state committee. He based his speech on bossism. Mr. Niles in accepting the chairmanship advised that the convention avoid taking up national issues, but he declared "if this were a Presidential ratification meeting I should shout with all my power for Wilson and Marshall and register my approval of the Baltimore Democratic platform."

They can have only a beneficial effect when used for kidney and bladder troubles, for backache, rheumatism, weak back or lumberago. Ed. D. Heckerman.

A MIGHTY REMEDY

Cures Backache, Sideache, and all Kidney, Liver and Bladder Diseases, or Money Back.

Yes, money back; that's the offer that Ed. D. Heckerman, the agent in Bedford, makes if Thompson's Barosma fails to cure any of the above named diseases.

And when you stop to think, that's a wonderfully generous offer from the viewpoint of the afflicted, the sick and the suffering.

So if you are ill, have the blues, have lost ambition, have backache or pains in your side, if your urine is high colored, and your eyes dull and complexion sallow, the chances are that your kidneys are weak and clogged up, and that your blood is full of impurities.

So why wait when Thompson's Barosma is guaranteed to restore your health. Get a bottle today at Ed. D. Heckerman's. There are two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00.

Five years ago Charles Schultz of Dunkirk, N. Y., was so weak and run down that he decided to give up his business. He took Barosma, and in a few months he regained his health and gained 55 pounds in weight. Today he writes: "I have been in perfect health ever since I wrote you five years ago." All druggists.

Fertilizer For Fall Delivery

The actual plant food in the high grade materials bought by the Farmers' Exchange for its members, costs, at your own railroad station, as follows:

Available phosphoric acid... 3.81c lb
Actual potash... 4.10c lb
Available nitrogen... 16.2c lb
Available ammonia... 10.89c lb

How Much Will This Save You?

You can easily figure for yourself. Take a familiar case, a brand guaranteed to contain 1% nitrogen, 8% phosphoric acid (available) and 2% actual potash. That brand would cost you home mixed as follows:

1% nitrogen (1% of 2000 lbs) 20 lbs nitrogen at 16.2c... $3.24
8% available phosphoric acid (8% of 2000 lbs), 160 lbs at 3.81c... 6.10
2% potash (2% of 2000 lbs), 40 lbs at 4.10c... 1.64

Total cost of home mixture... $10.98
This would replace a ton of 1:8:2, and if you bought that ton ready mixed it would cost you, at current market rates, $22 or more.

Remember in checking up the cost of commercial brands you must always figure on the lowest figures mentioned in the guaranty; as the lowest figures are all you get in the actual mixture.

Take the above figures, check up what your own brand that you have been using really ought to cost you; remember that home mixing is simple and easy; and then write to the Farmers' Exchange, giving your postoffice address and your railroad station. Enclose a 2c stamp and the Exchange will send you full information about how to buy, how much to buy; and, where it is possible to do so, will get enough orders together to make a solid carload to your own station, thereby saving considerable freight to each buyer. Write now. Do not put it off until the "rush season" is on.

Schellsburg, Pa., July 3, 1912.

In these days of high cost of living a medicine that gets a man out of bed and able to work in a few days is a valuable and welcome remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., had kidney and bladder trouble, was confined to his bed, unable to turn without help. "I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and can truly say I was relieved at once." His example is worth following. Ed. D. Heckerman.

A Greenhouse on Wheels

Ordinarily, carnation plants raised in the open during the summer months must be transplanted in a greenhouse for winter production, but one grower has developed a plan of transplanting his greenhouse instead of the plants. Five light trucks placed on concrete foundations, were laid lengthwise of the carnation beds, and a greenhouse 174 feet long by 35 feet wide, consisting of four bays and covering a total ground space of 24,360 square feet, was built on wheels. Plants are set out in the carnation beds in the spring and the traveling greenhouse is moved into position over them in the fall, thus allowing the growing process to continue without interruption. Pictures of this unusual greenhouse appear in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Your Lungs and Throat.

The preparation mentioned by the Rev. Chas. Sager has been for over sixty years of incalculable worth to sufferers from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, grippe, coughs, colds and all lung and throat diseases, and is a household remedy in many, many homes to which it has brought health and happiness.

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT.

600 N. 3rd St., New York City. Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of; that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly, REV. CHAS. SAGER, Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.) N. Y.

The above letter shows what a great boon the Wilson Remedy was to Mr. Sager, but it is but one of thousands received testifying to the curative powers of this wonderful remedy. Write at once to Mr. Abbott at the above address and he will furnish you convincing proof of the great worth to humanity of this preparation.

HECKERMAN LETTER

P-Nut Salesman on Southern Trip—Describes West Virginia Scenery.

Terra Alta, W. Va., July 9, 1912.

My friends, here is a mountain town 2,900 feet above sea level. It has only 1,200 inhabitants, two banks and five churches and is not even a county seat, yet it has a couple miles of paved streets and well paved with brick, all of which has been done within two years and done without the aid of beer money, for they have had no license for a number of years.

At first a few blocks were paved and this small colony of wide-awake citizens said, "This is a good thing, push it along," and they did. No one seems to be any the poorer by having to pay their pro rata for this work. Oh, why can't dear old Bedford arise, shake herself and shine in all the glory of the noon day's sun, by paving her streets?

The nicely paved streets are not all the glory that Terra Alta has, for here the Pugh and Beaver Grocery Company have a branch, which is now and has been for several years, managed by John W. Whitaker, a prince of good fellows. He is small of stature, but a wonderful brainy man; in fact a whole team with the "yaller" dog under the wagon. One who has, by his very gentlemanly demeanor, endeared himself to all.

The soil grows good hay with lots of weeds in it. The water here is fine and, if they put forth another effort, this will be the county seat in place of Kingwood, which is a town with nothing to brag about.

Altamont, I am told, is a higher point than this. Gee, but it gets cold up here when the mercury goes down, way down below zero. If the Bedford man, who recently had his leg frozen when forty below zero, were to lie up here in mid winter, he could have his whole body frozen and it would not cost so much.

The scenery coming over here from Cumberland is perfectly grand. We had ten cars on our train, No. 55. These were hurried along by two monster engines, which made quite a noise with their snorting and grunting as they pulled hard against the mountain side. We passed Keyser, a town of no mean pretensions, and six miles further along we passed through Piedmont, where the Piedmont Grocery Company live, a live, energetic concern with a hustling set of salesmen. One of these, a Mr. Brandenburg, having placed his shoulder to the wheel and pushed the sale of P-nut products, as made in Bedford, during the past six months has secured for himself a new automobile.

The chestnut trees are in bloom and they present a beautiful sight, one well worth a trip through the country to see. When coming this trip over the mountains from Cumberland, always try to sit on the right hand side of the car. The scenery is the prettiest.

By and by we came to Rowlesburg. There is one hotel here and it makes no pretensions save to fill three times the inner being of some railroad hands. I don't think they care for the trade from the knights of the road and from the looks of the ledger they do not have many either.

Next in line was Morgantown, W. Va., where many glass plants and tin mills hum and make business for the merchant. The largest tin mill here once a year gives its employees a holiday for a picnic and which is held up at Oakwood park, an elegant place of one hundred acres out some eighteen miles from the town. It is reached by the M. & K. R. R. Now this tin mill employs over six hundred hands and when these go out with their families, it makes a show, which it did the day of the picnic.

Next Fairmont is reached at 8 p. m. This is where the celebrated Skinkers' Tavern is situated. I told you once about it, how the old proprietor when told he could not live sent for the leader of the band and after putting an X in his hand, said: "Now the snake feeders tell me I am going to die and I want you to have your band march before the hearse and play as they go to the graveyard 'Marching Through Georgia.'" "All right," said the bandmaster, "but what shall we play coming back?" "Oh, I don't care as I won't be with you."

Please send me the paper to Travelers Inn, Ashland, Ky., and oblige Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

Business men of Honolulu, Hawaii, are preparing to build a modern hotel on the reef off Diamond Head, where the naval station is located. The most interesting feature of the hotel will be a glass-walled shaft which will extend down into the sea, allowing the guests to descend and observe the wonderful sea life in that locality. A page view of the shaft as projected appears in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Ipecac, a trailing plant, thrives best in clay soil along the banks of rivers. While it requires a great deal of moisture, it cannot live under water, and consequently in Colombia it is found at its best development in regions where the rivers do not overflow.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of, and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to other cough medicines because it quickly cures coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. Ed. D. Heckerman.

DOWN WITH BUGHOUSE!

The fly that bites your nose at church Does everything around besmirch. He bites the dog and chews the cow, Rides the insanity saw. Then through the golden butter crawls And in your coffee cup quick falls. To arms! To arms! Oh, swat, swat, swat! Kill every fly dead on the spot!

That cumsion rambler on the wall, Why, sure, he has no right at all To hid himself in wife's false hair And bite her on her cheek so fair. He'll charge from out your Sunday whiskers And chew your bald head full of blisters. Rise, swat that bedbug; he has germs. Don't compromise on any terms.

The world is getting all bughouse With rats and mice and fleas and louse And caterpillars down our neck And microbes crawling by the peck. Rise, swing the sword of Bunker Hill! Around you bughouse blood do spill! When bughouse is annihilated Then have yourself well fumigated. C. M. BARNITZ.

TEST THAT THERMOMETER.

It may be news to you that glass shrinks with age, and if that incubator thermometer tube is not thoroughly aged, so that the shrinkage occurs before it is tested and sealed, the shrinkage of the bulb will cause the mercury to rise and give a reading several degrees higher than it is.

This accounts for many failures to hatch. The operator kicks the machine, curses the manufacturer or blames the eggs when it's that little four inch thermometer that was made wrong or went wrong.

A jar, a fall when the instrument is knocked down by chicks, causes an invisible crack in the glass, which spoils the criterion on which the success of the hatch depends. So it pays to test that incubator thermometer, and it is done quickly and easily.

You simply compare it with a clinical thermometer like the doctor uses to get the temperature of his patient. They sell for $1 at the drug store and are supposed to be nearest perfect.

Place the two thermometers on the same level in warm water in a vessel and note the reading of both.

If yours differs do not throw it away, but mark the scale and make allowance for the difference when you run your machine.

DON'TS.

Don't sell eggs in cheap season at a loss. Preserve in water glass for winter and beat the trust.

Don't set the chick coop on the same place it stood last year. Filthy ground and rain bring the grapes again.

Don't imagine that we sell all the machinery seen in these columns, nor raise all the breeds shown. We neither manage a menagerie nor a machinery emporium.

Don't put turkey poult on the barn floor in rainy season. They get crippled with cramp. A dry, wired, open front scratch shed is the place on rainy days.

Don't jump to the conclusion that you have been cheated when you get a poor hatch in that new incubator. Remember the man operating the machine figures much in its success.

Don't let brooder house chicks run on bare cement. A board floor covered with dry loamy sand or cut wheat straw makes the best playgrounds for chicks.

Don't get the reform fad. A little reform now and then is relished by the best of men, and some we know who don't object occasionally to being henpecked, but if you must reform the race please start the stunt some other place.

Don't use cantharides for egg tonic. You may ruin your whole flock in short meter. Feed a la natura.

Don't ascribe a fowl's desertion of a hen roost to contrariness. The red mites have likely chased her out!

MY GRANDFATHER'S BARN.

How well I remember my grandfather's barn That stood by the road with its doors high and wide, Its big floor, the windmill, the pitchforks, The hay hole, the hay fork, The high piled up mows, where I often would hide!

How the rain pattered down on the shingles above me As I slept, covered up with the sweet scented hay. The twittering swallows flying so near me The hens cackling loud and the cocks crowing gay!

How I loved to ride in on the high loaded ladders And pitch the big sheaves to the mows overhead, Then to lift the stone jug while the water went "gurgle" And cooled my dry throat as downward it sped.

The horses all neighing when I came near them, The cows mooing low as they stood in their stalls, The humming of feed when the day's work was over. The song of the milkmaid as whippoorwill calls!

How oft as I sit in my life's quiet evening Those days of my boyhood return with their charm And I dream that I'm back at the old happy homestead, A barefooted boy at play in the barn! C. M. BARNITZ.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS.

Q. Are ducks a success at hatching hen's eggs? A. No. They think the chicks come out too soon and eat 'em alive.

Q. Can a hen tell when an egg is fertile and if there is a chicken in it? A. An egg under incubation soon begins to develop heat and toward the end of hatch gets so hot the hen stands up to let her eggs cool. The germ develops rapidly. Its heart beats, it grows and moves in the shell and toward the last peeps and knocks against the shell. The hen notes all these manifestations of life. She answers the chick and encourages it to come out of the shell. Certain fowls even break the shell and help their young to escape.

Q. Why do many fanciers feed little or no corn in summer? A. It is too heating, causes overfat and is conducive to cholera and other digestive diseases. Overfat retards the molt, cuts down the eggs and causes infertility.

Q. In plucking geese what is done with the tail and wing feathers? A. Tail and wings are not plucked; just the soft body feathers.

Q. I have a pair of homers that can hatch, but cannot raise squabs. What is the trouble? A. Your old birds are poor feeders. It is likely old and young birds have small throats, an obstacle to success with pigeons.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

While a Methodist minister at Atlantic City was saying grace at the table of a member a thief slipped into the kitchen and skipped with the roast chicken, and so the poor preacher had none. Atlantic City is such a Sodom that, like Lot, the preachers get the habit of praying loud and long, and the chicken grabber knew he'd be squares away before the preacher would amen say.

Turkey gobblers sometimes seem to get jealous of the poult and have been known to kill off a whole brood. The male ostrich often does this trick, and that is one reason why Mother Ostrich is so careful to hide her nest.

When the old hens drop their wings and pant for breath at night, open all the windows and ventilators, and, if that doesn't bring them comfort, set up some roosts in the poultry yard and shut them out to sleep in the open. Heat prostration is the ruin of many a fine flock.

Madison Square Garden, New York's great amphitheater, where America's greatest poultry show is held, has a three years' lease of life, when it will be torn down and replaced by a greater structure. To win at Madison Square is the climax win the ne plus ultra ad., so hustle and win at the Garden if you would have your name in the rooster hall of fame.

Shade is so very easily secured and is so beautiful and beneficial that we can't understand why so many poultry yards are without trees. We just set out twenty-five peach trees in one of our yards. Now, just imagine how we shall enjoy that fruit, how our birds will enjoy the shade, what a picture the pink blossoms will make; then go thou and do likewise.

Seven palace cars of poultry, about 1,000 birds, were exhibited by one Pennsylvania poultry fancier at fairs in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland last fall. The ribbons won filled a barrel.

Naturalist A. C. Bent has found a new sub species of ptarmigan, an arctic fowl much like the hen, that changes its summer garb of grayish buff to pure white in winter. Some of those snowy winter show roosters must be related to this arctic fowl, for in summer they are beautiful brass. Maybe their owners belong to Dr. Cook's arctic Ananias club.

A turkey cock belonging to A. McCaskey of McCracken Kn., was inclosed in a snowdrift for thirty-two days and survived to get fat and strut again, while a goose owned by William Buckhannon, while buried in a drift for fourteen days, laid two eggs and reemitted little the worse for wear.

You are great on cool drinks in the summer. It's soda, soda, soda, and who can blame you? Yes, keep cool; drink cooling beverages, plenty, of fresh, cold, pure water and eat cooling foods! The same principle applies to the hen and men.

A GAME OF POKER

By J. B. FERGUSON

I was playing a friendly game of poker with my two friends, Bingle and Parkinson. We had played together often for fun and when we sat down to a game this Saturday afternoon had no idea of running into a big game. But Bingle, who was a real estate dealer, had made a large sale, pocketing several thousand dollars commission, which had just been paid him in cash. Parkinson was operating in wheat and had just closed out an investment which had paid him $15,000. As for me, I was on the opposite side of this luck, having lost $300 by the bursting of a bank. Nevertheless I had $50 in my pocket that had been paid me after banking hours.

As may be supposed, I was not responsible for the high betting that gradually grew upon the party. I was drawn into it very unwillingly. It started by Bingle's getting a full of nines and Parkinson getting three aces.

I dropped out then, and Bingle won $140. It's easier to expand than to contract, and after that, there being some good hands around the board, we kept betting higher with every hand. Though I had very little money to start in with, I had unlimited credit with my two friends. Indeed, though the other two had the cash, we played on tab. But with us tab was as good as gold.

Bingle and Parkinson were both winners. I was a loser. I had no business to be in such a game, for the loss of a thousand dollars or thereabouts would break me up. Of course my friends wouldn't press me for any quick payment, or any payment at all for that matter, but I would pay any way, or if I didn't I could never look either of them in the face till I did.

Instead of losing a thousand I got socked for three or four thousand. The devil seems to be in cards. Here were three bosom friends, wild with excitement, trying to ruin one another, who under other influences would give their lives for an opposite purpose. We grew more and more wrought up till a jack pot was opened and every man came into the betting.

Now, it was evident from the moment we all took up our hands that there was going to be some pretty warm betting, but whether it was to be on big hands or bluffing on small ones was a question. Desperate, I sailed in on three tens. Bingle raised me, and Parkinson raised Bingle. We were slapping on the bets with some six or seven thousand dollars in the pot when we were brought to a halt by a sharp ring on the telephone bell. Somebody from Parkinson's house asked us if Parkinson was with us and when told that he was said he was wanted at home immediately; his wife had fainted.

Parkinson threw down his card-face on the table, and ran out of the room, leaving me and Bingle with a big pile in the pot. We concluded to wait awhile, thinking that Parkinson might telephone us after getting home. So he did, but his wife had received a stroke and had died before he reached her.

Of course some time must elapse before our game could be resumed. After consultation, Bingle and I decided to drive a tack through each hand, face down, fastening it to the table. This was done, and, scooping the pot into a handkerchief, tied up the corners and it was committed to Bingle's charge. Then we went about our business.

Parkinson caught cold on the day of his wife's funeral and was confined to the house. He lay there for three months, during which time I suffered untold agony, not knowing whether I was out some $6,000, which meant ruin to me, or by the hand that was locked up I would come out even. As fond as I was of Parkinson, I preferred that he should die rather than linger between life and death, keeping me in suspense. Such is the influence of gambling.

Parkinson finally died, and Bingle and I had a conference as to what we should do about the locked up poker pot.

Parkinson's interest in it was a part of his estate, and when a man dies the law takes charge of his estate to see that it goes to the proper owner and no one has any right to touch any part of it. The condition was not on' inconvenient, but embarrassing. It kept me on the anxious seat, and in order to settle who owned the poker pot the whole matter must come out and not only must it be known that Bingle and I, who lived, had been in indulging in a big game, but the same reflection would be cast upon Parkinson who was dead.

Bingle and I went together to a lawyer, told him all about the matter and asked his advice. He took a week to look up the case, then asked us to his office and said:

"The jack pot, according to certain decisions I have run across, is part of Wilkinson's estate—if he won it. But if he didn't win and he owed either or both of you money by gambling losses you can't collect under the law."

"You mean," I interrupted, "it is heads Parkinson's estate wins and tails we lose?"

"Thereabout," he slung a lot of Latin things at us. Then we left him. Defying the law, we went to the room where the cards were and turned over the cards. Parkinson held a pair of deuces, Bingle kings on serens, and I as I have said three tens.

The hands squared us all around, and I have never touched a card for money from that day to this, and never will.

A STRONG PLATFORM

Among the platforms that have been adopted by political parties from the foundation of the Government, the declaration of principles by the Baltimore Convention, to the carrying out of which Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate for President is pledged, so far as in his power lies, is worthy a prominent place. While lengthy it uses no superfluous words in making excuses for its clear and unequivocal declarations and promises.

This document is worthy careful study by every elector of the nation. It is progressive in tendency but advocates no ruthless iconoclasm.

Following are the essential features of the document as condensed by the New York World:

1. A tariff for revenue only; immediate revision downward of existing extortionate rates; trust-controlled products to be put upon the free list.
2. Civil and criminal prosecution of trusts; new legislation to prevent monopoly and stock-watering; an amendment of the Anti-Trust law to make it fully effective.
3. Preservation of all the rights and powers of the states in combating commercial and industrial combination and conspiracy, national remedies to be added to and not substituted for state remedies.
4. A demand for ratification of the amendments providing for the income tax and the popular election of Senators.
5. Publicity for all recommendations upon which Presidential appointments are made, for the ownership of newspapers, and for contributions and expenditures in national political campaigns.
6. Presidential primaries and popular election of National Committeemen, who are to take office immediately after they are named.
7. The use of money at national elections by corporations to be made unlawful.
8. A single term for the President, to which the candidate is pledged.
9. Supervision and rate regulation of railroad, express, telegraph and telephone companies.
10. Revision of the banking laws to prevent the concentration and misuse of money; no Government deposits in favored banks, real estate to be accepted as security for a reasonable proportion of national bank loans.
11. Comprehensive legislation for the improvement of the great rivers and the prevention of floods.
12. No false issue as to the judiciary; as judicial processes may be abused, we must guard them against abuse.
13. Trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt; rigid impartiality in all proceedings involving injunctions, with no prejudice against labor organizations; an independent Department of Labor; an employees' compensation law.
14. Pure-food laws that will not be subordinated to any commercial or financial interest.
15. Comprehensive conservation measures in the public interest, but so drawn and construed as not to abridge the rights of bona-fide settlers.
16. A declaration of the Nation's purpose to liberate and recognize the independence of the Philippines under certain conditions.
17. Territorial government for the people of Alaska; legislation to make the Alaskan coal deposits available without monopoly.

18. Encouragement of the merchant marine, but without bounties or subsidies.

19. The establishment of a parcel post or postal express; extension of rural delivery.

20. Equality of all citizens, irrespective of race or creed, with full protection of their lives, rights and property in foreign countries.

21. Exemption from tolls of American coastwise ships passing through the Panama Canal, no use of the canal by ships owned by railroads in competition with the canal.

22. Extension to civil service employees of the benefits of the Employers' Liability law; no abridgment of their right to petition for redress of grievances.

These are the declarations and pledges upon which the Democratic party is now before the people of the nation asking for the election of Woodrow Wilson to the Presidency, and well may they hope for favorable returns in November, for a candidate strong and clean with the courage of his convictions, standing upon such a platform merits success for his party and himself.

The Man That Figured

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

It was a May day when the man that gave his name as Ezekiel Harper arrived in the village of Oakville and told the landlord of the tavern that he wanted rest and might stay for a couple of months.

At the end of three weeks the village constable, the justice of the peace, the leading merchant and others had a sort of meeting at which it was resolved that a stranger that wouldn't tell all about himself was probably hiding from the law. This resolution was handed to Mr. Harper by the constable, and after reading it two or three times the newcomer carelessly said:

"I kinder want a rest and I kinder want to figger something out."

"But we don't like it. We don't like it," announced the man of the law.

"Well, I dunno what you are going to do about it."

Neither did the constable nor anybody else. Mr. Harper paid his board every Saturday night in good and lawful money, and if he was a fugitive from justice he didn't do any skulking. Soon after he had been told what the public thought of him he bought a tape-line at one of the stores. Of course the clerk that sold it to him asked him what he was going to do with it, but Mr. Harper refused to give out any information whatever. This nearly resulted in another public meeting. But for the fact that the man was seen measuring the distance from the schoolhouse to the bridge the meeting would have been held and at least three different resolutions adopted.

And the next day Mr. Harper measured the distance between the tavern and a mudhole a hundred feet away.

A day elapsed. It was spent by Mr. Harper in figuring, and he took great care that his figures should not be seen by others. Deacon Smythe had always had great good luck in pumping strangers, and he was called upon to exercise his talents on the man of mystery. He took a seat beside him on the tavern veranda and began:

"Mr. Harper, this town of Oakville is inhabited by plain people."

"Yes."

"We have nothing to conceal."

"No."

"Then I shall expect you to answer a few questions concerning yourself. Where do you come from?"

"I believe they call the place Hades row, but that hasn't changed the temperature any!"

"Sir! Sir! This to me!" shouted Deacon Smythe.

"Please don't bother me—I want to figger."

When it became known how Deacon Smythe had been turned down that second public meeting was held. The resolutions were bold and red hot. The landlord must give Mr. Harper notice to quit. He must also make oath as to what suspicious things he had observed. Mr. Harper must tell why he came to Oakville instead of stopping at Mount Ivy. He must also make a clean breast of the tape-line and measuring affair. If not—But he must. The committee named proceeded to the hotel and reached the place just as Mr. Harper returned from measuring the distance between the cooper shop and the frog pond.

"Sir!" said the undertaker, who was chairman by virtue of having the deepest voice. "We must know all about you or there will be consequences. For one thing the landlord will turn you out."

"Then he'll get a suit for damages?" was the reply.

"But, sir, it is a consensus of opinion that you are a—"

"Suspicious character?"

"Yes—ah—yes. Yes, sir, that is it."

"Thanks. Tomorrow I will begin suit against each and every one of you."

That shot told. The committee left, and the landlord had nothing to say, and for three days men shivered when they thought of damage suits. Then Mr. Harper packed his trunk and left. In leaving he placed a written explanation in the landlord's hands to be read to all interested parties. It read as follows:

"The distance from the schoolhouse to the bridge is just 209 feet and 7 inches. What I was figuring on was the distance it would be if about forty old soakers and lazybones in this town had to let whisky alone and go to work."

"The distance between the tavern and the mudhole down the street, which has been a mudhole for forty years, is just ninety-seven feet and four and a half inches. I was figuring on how a shovelful of that mud could get into the coffeepot every morning at breakfast."

"The distance between the cooper shop and the frog pond is exactly 234 feet and 1 inch. What I was figuring on was how much less it would be if all the bullfrogs came ashore and helped the people of the town to poke their noses into knotholes to try to find out other people's business."

"I was going to measure the distance between Squire Hampton's spotted dog and Deacon Smythe's onion bed, but not wishing the community to suffer agony I have determined to take my departure."

The above explanations went from man to man and from house to house, and every man and woman was mean enough to say:

"There, didn't I tell you he was all right, but you were just idiot enough to differ with me!"

Evelyn Pierce

A Story of the Old U. S. Army

By EDWIN THORNTON

The days of army posts on the western frontier, a garrison shut up by itself with no outsiders to see or talk with or even hear about, are over. Then, too, in those days—they are not so far distant—occasionally Indians must be driven back on to their reservations, and sometimes they would be too strong for the little garrison, and days and nights of agony would pass in expectation of their making a break in the walls and murdering every one inside the inclosure, including women and children.

Yet there was a pleasant side to the life. The garrison shut off from the world constituted a family consisting of two divisions, the one being composed of the officers and their families the other of the men and their families. Between officers and men was a dividing line as to association on familiar terms, but there was a union of heart. The enlisted men understood that this line had from time immemorial been considered necessary to the discipline and efficiency of an army.

Years ago there was one of these army posts in what is now a sovereign state in the American Union. One day when a supply train arrived it brought something to stir the tiresome life of the officers' division—a young lady. She came to visit Mrs. Major Bertrand wife of the commandant, whose niece she was. Her coming had been talked about, but her appearance was disappointing. She was not especially pretty, though she possessed a soft dark eye which was very expressive, though of what no one could exactly determine.

Within four hours after her arrival she had divided the garrison into two sections, consisting of those who liked and those who distrusted her.

However, it was not long before her friends were converted to the opposite side by the fact that she was caught talking with a private in the ranks named Conover. A few of those who had fancied her remonstrated with her, telling her that perhaps she didn't know that association with an enlisted man by the families of the officers was prohibited. She listened to them demurely with those singular eyes of hers fixed on them, but said nothing. Nevertheless only a few days had passed when she was again seen talking with the same man.

The matter now came to the ears of Mrs. Bertrand, who gave her niece a lecture and told her that if she was against caught noticing any one of the enlisted men as an equal she should be sent home. Then Evelyn—Evelyn Pierce was her name—asked with real or feigned innocence—her aunt could not tell which—why she could not treat one in the ranks just as she would treat an officer. Mrs. Bertrand could only say that it wasn't the custom and has been an unwritten law in the army.

And so Miss Pierce was in disfavor. Those who showed their condemnation most openly were the women of the garrison. The officers, whatever they thought of the young lady's action, though they refrained from showing her marked attention, always treated her with studied politeness. This was due the commandant's wife, whose niece and guest she was. But it was not long before several of the unmarried officers began to find it difficult to let Miss Pierce alone. There was something about her that the cloud hanging over her could not obscure. Furthermore, she had voluntarily brought that cloud upon herself and gave no evidence of being ashamed of it. Possibly an attraction in her was that no one could quite make her out. Some said she was a fool, others that she was very shrewd.

One day an Indian came into the fort and told the major commanding that those of his tribe on the reservation the fort was intended to keep in order were preparing for war. He said that he knew in the end an uprising would be disastrous to his red brothers and that the move would be a grievous error. At any rate, he had come to warn his white brother, and having come, he could not go back. He must remain in the fort or be killed. It was, of course, suffered to remain.

The coming of this redskin, who soon became known as "Uncas," a deeper blot upon Miss Pierce. He was seen to look at her covetously, and she was seen chatting with him, as she had chatted with Private Conover. Soon after this conversation she went to the major and told him to look out for Uncas. The major asked her on what she based her distrust, and she replied that he had a wicked eye. The major told his wife what Evelyn had said, but as no one else had noticed any wickedness in the redskin's eye and as Mrs. Bertrand was very much troubled about Evelyn's actions she lost her equanimity and attributed her niece's accusation to a desire to hide the real cause of her treatment of him. The major did not entirely agree with his wife, but he couldn't send Uncas out on suspicion to be murdered by his own people, so he took no action in the premises.

One evening when darkness had fallen Uncas met Evelyn just going into her aunt's quarters and beckoned her to follow him, whispering, "I show you something to prove me the white man's friend." She did as he desired, and he led her to the back of the magazine, which was hidden from view, and, removing some rubbish, exposed a hole through which, by stooping, one might pass.

"Go in," he said. "I show you what I mean."

Evelyn drew back. "I show you that somebody here is a traitor; he goin' blow up magazine."

Evelyn hesitated, but not for long. Possibly the man whom she knew had been captivated by her appearance—for she had spoken to him but once and then to warn him not to trouble her—had a secret which he would give to her alone. Bending low, she went through the opening. She could see nothing for the darkness. On a shelf stood a lantern, which Uncas instantly lighted; then, after pretending to look for something, seizing her and clapping his hand over her mouth, he dragged her through another opening, and she found herself outside the fort. What she had suspected was plain to her now, though so great was her terror that it only flashed through her mind. Uncas had come to the fort to effect an entrance for his comrades. He had secretly made the opening to the magazine, concealed it and made another through the wall of the fort. Desiring to possess her, he had arranged to take her with him when he went back to his people. Doubtless long before dawn he would lead them through the magazine into the fort and massacre the garrison before they could form to repel the attack.

Evelyn was very strong for a girl. She had not been captured long before summoning all her strength for a supreme effort—it was enhanced by terror—she wrenched herself from the Indian, and before he could get his grip on her again she darted away for the fort. She ran in the dark, but took no thought of falling. Fortune favored her in this, while it deserted the Indian. He fell, and while he was getting on his feet again Evelyn gained sufficient advantage to reach the opening into the fort and pass through it. When Uncas entered through the same aperture she was standing by a barrel of gunpowder, from which the head had been removed, holding the lantern directly over it.

"Come a step farther," she said. "and I'll drop it."

She stood at bay ready to sacrifice herself and the Indian. Savage as he was, he at once began to look for some strategem by which he could again get the advantage of her. Drawing away, he feigned fright, then penitence, telling her he had been tempted by his passion for her to take her to his own wigwam and make her his wife. He would rather die than harm her.

This and other things he said watching her like a cat for an opportunity to catch her off her guard and get her again in his power. Meanwhile she was thinking how to get out of his clutches. She could hear a sentry walking on the parapet, though his steps were only audible to her when he came to that end of his beat nearest the magazine. He had turned and gone to the other end when she formed a resolution. She listened to Uncas although moved by his penitence till the sentry came back to the end of his beat nearest her, then gave a shriek so loud that had it not been inclosed would have awakened the garrison.

Major Bertrand had given orders that a key to the magazine door should hang in the sentry box of the man who guarded it. Since the magazine was never unguarded the key was always within reach of a sentinel. The man hearing the shriek, seized the key and opening the door, saw Evelyn standing by a powder barrel. The moment she saw him she pointed to the hole in the wall leading from the magazine by which the Indian had beaten a retreat.

A hasty explanation ensued, and within a few minutes men on horse back started after Uncas. In his fall when chasing Evelyn he had received a sprain which deterred him in his flight. Hearing his pursuers near upon him he crawled under a bush, but they had caught sight of him and, pressing on, dragged him out.

When they reached the fort with him they took him to the commandant's quarters, where Evelyn had gone and after a fainting spell, had regained somewhat of her equanimity.

After a brief examination Uncas was taken out and shot.

So ended an attempt of the Indians to gain by strategem possession of the fort, which doubtless would have been successful had not the man to put it in practice lost his head over a woman. Had he not attempted to take Evelyn with him he could easily have introduced his red brothers and caught the garrison napping.

A great change came over those who had turned a cold shoulder upon Evelyn. She had warned them against the savage and by her heroism had saved them from being massacred. And not long afterward another matter was cleared up.

Private Conover was not Conover at all, but Eugene Werner, a gentleman's son, who had enlisted in the ranks for the life, the experience and a possible commission in the army. Evelyn had recognized him as such when the others had either failed to do so or had declined to take notice of the fact. After the episode which had nearly become a tragedy Evelyn openly associated with him, and Major Bertrand for her sake recommended the young man for a commission. Then he and Evelyn became engaged and were married at the fort.

It was then that a latent infatuation several of the officers had conceived for Evelyn flamed up, and they condemned themselves for not having made an effort to win her.

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 14, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark iv, 1-20. Memory Verse, 20—Golden Text, Jas. 1-21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

"Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people." "Anointed with the Holy Ghost and with power, He went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with Him" (Matt. iv, 23; Acts x, 38). The great topic of Scripture is the kingdom fore-shadowed in the dominion over all things granted to Adam and Eve and consummated when the kingdoms of this world shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever (Gen. i, 26-28; Rev. xi, 15). After Adam lost the dominion by listening to the devil, handing the dominion over to him and thus bringing sin and the curse upon our race and the earth, God began to reveal by type and plain statement a Redeemer and a redemption and a restoration of all that was lost by sin. The Redeemer is first mentioned as the seed of the woman, the redemption is set forth in the sacrifice which provided the coats of skins, and the restoration is seen in the cherubim (Gen. iii, 15, 21, 24). Later it was revealed that the Redeemer would be the seed of Abraham, having a special people on earth called Israel, the twelve tribes from the twelve sons of Jacob, and that through them all nations would be blessed. Still later it was revealed to David that the Lord's anointed would proceed from Him, sit upon His throne and reign forever, and to Him give all the prophets witness. Matthew's gospel opens with a statement concerning Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the Son of Abraham, the one in whom all the promises would be fulfilled. During His public ministry of three or four years and also during the forty days between His resurrection and ascension the kingdom was His one great topic, but those to whom He specially came despised and rejected Him, asked for a murderer instead of Him, said, "We have no king but Caesar," and cried concerning Jesus Christ, "Crucify Him, crucify Him!" It was after they determined to kill Him that He began to teach in parables as in the lesson of today, which is recorded also in Matt. xiii and Luke vii. The words in Matt. xiii, 1, "The same day went Jesus out of the house and sat by the seaside," are very suggestive of the fact that He was about to leave the house of Israel and gather from the sea of nations a special people for a special purpose. In Heb. iii, 5, 6, we read of Moses faithful in all his house as a servant and of Christ as a Son over His own house. In Matt. xxiii, 38, 39 Jesus said, "Behold your house is left unto you desolate, for I say unto you ye shall not see Me henceforth till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." We are waiting for that "till," or as it is in Luke xix, 12, "occupy till I come," and in I Cor. xi, 26, "Shew the Lord's death till He come," or in Ezek. xxi, 27; Acts iii, 21, "I will overturn till He come whom the heavens must receive until the times of restoration of a things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets." The kingdom is no mystery, but one of the plainest things revealed in the Scriptures, but that the kingdom which was at hand should be postponed and an age intervene between its rejection and its actual coming was something not before revealed, and only fully revealed later to Paul, as he states in Eph. iii and elsewhere. This age in which we still live is covered by the seven parables of Matt. xiii, the first of which and its explanation we have in our lesson in Mark today. He spoke the parable to the multitudes but explained it to His disciples when alone with them, saying, "Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God, but unto them that are without all these things are done in parables." Then He gave the reason (verses 10-12). In verse 13 He seems to indicate that this parable of the sower is a key to all the parables, or that this one is so simple that if they understood it not it would be difficult for them to understand any. With the explanation given so fully by Himself, no further comment is necessary. Let us, however, note carefully that the great work given us is to sow diligently the incorruptible seed of the word of God (Luke viii, 11; I Pet. i, 23), remembering that He will watch over it and it will not fail to accomplish His pleasure (Jer. i, 12, R. V. Isa. lv, 11). The devil is always ready to snatch away the word lest people should believe and be saved. He is the god of this world, blinding the minds of those who believe not (II Cor. iv, 4). The thing to do is to receive the word with meekness and to bring forth fruit with patience (Jas. i, 21; Luke viii, 16). If we are true believers saved fully and forever by the great sacrifice of Christ, we will, by His grace, have victory over the cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the pleasures of this life and the lust of all other things which might choke the word and hinder our fruitfulness.
